

Let's Talk Trash - Part 2

Please join us tomorrow evening via Zoom for part two of our Trash Talks, where HRRRA Executive Director (and Garbage Guru) will dive into why our state is in a waste crisis and what we can all do to help, starting with "Taking The Challenge" and participate in our upcoming organic scrap drop-off and Save As You Throw pilot programs.

We will share more information on the pilot program, proposed new permit prices, and how anyone can take the challenge to reduce waste, and maybe even save a little money!

These new Transfer Station pilot programs are funded by a $55,000 Sustainable Materials Management grant award from the Department of Energy and Environmental Protection.

We hope you'll join us for this informative evening!

Tuesday
June 13th
6:00-7:30P
via

Jennifer Heaton-Jones, Executive Director of the regional governmental solid waste and recycling authority, HRRRA, will give a one hour presentation followed by a half hour Q & A. You're guaranteed to learn something new and be inspired to take the challenge!

What is "Save As You Throw"?
We'll break down this new model, and help understand how this will help solve the waste crisis in Connecticut.

Food Scrap Collection...huh?
We'll bust the myths of food scrap collection and detail how removing this heavy material from your garbage makes so much sense!

How will this save money?
Recycling and managing our garbage is getting confusing. Learn how this pilot program can save money and reduce waste.

As always, remember,
...take a breath,
...give folks a minute,
...assume some positive intent.

Stay well,
